Context of Its Formation: Development of Medical Education in Assam

The development of medical education in Assam has progressed in different phases:

1. Early Phase

Medical education in Assam began during the British period with the establishment of

- Assam Medical College (1947), the first medical college in the state.

2. Expansion Phase

To meet the growing healthcare demands, additional medical colleges were established:

- Gauhati Medical College (1960)
- Silchar Medical College (1968)
- Jorhat Medical College (2009)

These institutions strengthened structured medical education and healthcare delivery in the state.

3. Recent Growth Phase

In recent years, the Government of Assam accelerated the establishment of new medical colleges under centrally sponsored schemes and state initiatives. The objectives were to:

- Increase the doctor–population ratio.
- Improve healthcare access in rural and remote areas.
- Reduce patient load on existing medical colleges.

As part of this expansion strategy, Kokrajhar Medical College & Hospital was established to ensure balanced regional development and improved healthcare coverage in western Assam.

Significance of KMCH in Assam's Medical Education

1. Strengthens medical education in western Assam and the BTR region.
2. Increases MBBS seat capacity in the state.
3. Enhances tertiary healthcare services in Kokrajhar and nearby districts.
4. Supports the state's goal of expanding medical education infrastructure district-wise.
